

THE MYSTERY OF PELLAGRA

IS THE DISEASE REALLY DUE TO A DIET OF CORN?

Facts inconsistent with that theory found in the South—Extent of the disease exaggerated—A charge of "sectional conspiracy" is made.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 18.—The panicky feeling aroused by the recent discovery of pellagra in the South has been followed by an outburst of doubt as to whether the doctors and scientists have not been trifling with the people. "Is not much that has been said on the subject 'yellow disease'?" one of the people asked the other day; and there are not a few who pronounce the pellagra story a sectional conspiracy against the South.

If corn is the cause of the disease, as the doctors say, then these critics insist the trouble is with Northern corn. "The man who buys his meal made of Northern corn takes a risk," the Birmingham, Ala., Ledger declares, and a number of other Southern papers agree with it. "It has been known in the South for years that Western corn when bad will kill horses and mules; and thousands of these animals have died from it," it adds. The Ledger has a theory that the short season in the Northwest does not permit all the corn to ripen thoroughly, as in the South, and that being kept in bulk before or after it is made into meal it moults and causes illness in those who eat it. "This new disease," it concludes, "is part of the price we are paying for Western grain ground in steam mills."

This theory, which has become very popular in the South, may tend to check the strong prejudice against corn which has arisen. People have in some localities become so alarmed that they refuse to eat what has heretofore been one of the chief food products of the South. The panic has reached such a stage that not only corn pone and corn cake have gone out of fashion but even roasting ears.

Heretofore the South has bought a large share of its corn from the West, not having raised enough since the civil war for its own use. The boll weevil, which has induced many farmers to drop cotton and plant corn instead, has greatly increased the Southern corn crop this year, so that enough has been raised for all home needs. The farmers naturally do not like to have the proposition that corn is a dangerous food brought forward just at the time when they have dropped cotton and turned to corn. They are trying therefore to place the responsibility for pellagra on the Western grain and the manner in which the corn is ground in the Western mills, just as the London Lancet attributes appendicitis to the steam rollers employed in many of our flour mills.

The Macon, Ga., Telegraph regards the corn theory now prevailing as likely to do an immense amount of harm and believes that it is the result of a conspiracy against the South and this Southern product. "If the masses, especially in the South," says the Telegraph, "should become suspicious of corn bread, so long and no doubt rightly regarded as good and wholesome food, the situation will be deplorable."

The Telegraph is right. If the fear of corn spreads many thousands will go hungry in the South. Not many, however, accept the Telegraph theory of a conspiracy against corn although the fact is recalled to mind that many Western papers a year ago were widely circulating the story that beri-beri was due to eating rice, which story was likely to scare some people away from a rice diet and injure another Southern cereal. The Telegraph remarks: "This pellagra outcry and the association therewith of mind the suspicion of a purpose on the part of certain commercial interests to check the growing consumption of a cheaper food that seems destined to cut down the demand for wheat."

If rice causes beri-beri and corn causes pellagra the world will be hard put to it for cereals, for even wheat flour, the Lancet says, if crushed in the steel roller mills threatens appendicitis.

There is no question but that the scare has stimulated the demand for pure food laws. The Southern States that have not yet acted in the matter or have not shown much vigor in enforcing the pure food laws have been aroused from lethargy. Food products will be examined in the South for the next few years with a care never before displayed.

The belief that pellagra is not due to mouldy corn, strong in the beginning, has grown stronger as the facts have come out and there are now dozens of cases which disprove that theory. It may be that some of the cases are not genuine pellagra and the chances are very strong that a great many fraudulent or mistaken cases of the disease are being reported.

At first when only a few cases occurred here and there and a careful examination was made of each case by half a dozen experts there was little danger of a mistake, but now when pellagra is reported from every Southern State except Texas and Arkansas and from Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Michigan, the Western States, when the average country doctor thinks he is not up to date unless he has one or two patients down with pellagra; finally when Dr. C. H. Lavender reports 14,500 cases in the Southern States alone since 1906, a great many erroneous diagnoses may be regarded as certain. That exaggeration has really prevailed, no one can doubt. Cases now believed to be pellagra were reported a few months ago as eczema, stomach trouble, etc.; now the inclination is to call any cutaneous malady pellagra, and a suburb may bear that name because the disease in its first form looks like a case of sunburn.

It is estimated that there are not over 300 cases of what has conclusively been shown to be pellagra in this country. Of these eighty-eight are reported in Alabama, sixty-five in North Carolina, twenty-five in Ohio, twenty-one in Mississippi and the others in Illinois, Indiana, South Carolina, Georgia and Louisiana. Most of these cases are in State hospitals and State insane asylums, wrong the victims of pellagra usually go in their last stages for the disease winds up in a very aggravated form of insanity.

There are of course not all the cases of pellagra in the country, but they are all that can be conclusively so designated. It is not improbable that a thorough investigation will bring other cases to light, and in the present excitement such an investigation is likely to be made. Latterly doctors have been reporting away cases, that is, finding that the so-called pellagra is the same as the Italian. The hospital doctors declare that the disease is not contagious, but the view is not generally taken, and even the health boards are isolating the cases.

Another point on which public opinion disagrees with the physicians and the experts is as to the corn origin of the disease. In the present excitement the opposition is being made. Practically all the first reported pellagra cases reported were corn eaters, corn being their chief food. But there were several elements of weakness in the corn hypothesis for why should one member of a family of corn eaters be afflicted while the others who eat the same food escaped? Again, why if corn is the cause of pellagra did it not produce the disease long ago, for the Southern people have been living largely on corn for centuries? Again, why are most of the cases of the disease found among the whites, whereas the negroes eat more corn and that of a lower grade and more likely to be mouldy and musty?

The United States Marine Hospital has sought to answer these questions by declaring that, contrary to general belief, pellagra has existed in the South for a great many years but has passed unnoticed or gone by some other name. It is recalled that a doctor in New Orleans some years ago declared that he had found cases of pellagra in Louisiana, but he was laughed to scorn by his fellow practitioners.

Similarly, cases of pellagra were diagnosed at the Alabama State insane asylum at Tuscaloosa, but the diagnoses were not accepted. The declaration that the disease existed in the South for many years is of course only theory. All the medical reports insist that prior to the present outbreak only one case was seen in America. In New York, in 1883, the patient being an Italian who had come to this country already afflicted. No case can be traced further back than 1906, and the disease has actually been determined to be pellagra for barely twelve months.

The Italian theory as to the corn origin of the malady was at first accepted without question, although as stated there were certain facts inconsistent with that doctrine. A score of cases have turned out lately in which the disease could not have originated from eating mouldy corn because the patient had never eaten corn in any shape or form.

The Augusta, Ga., doctors were the first to present some very strong evidence on this point. The Savannah doctors reported a case of a woman dying of pellagra in that city who disliked corn and had never eaten it. Mrs. Kate Barto of Atlanta, Ga., now under treatment for pellagra, had never eaten corn bread or any corn product. At the Illinois State institutions at Dunning and Elgin the doctors unite in the declaration that cases of pellagra found in these institutions are not due to a diet of corn, but that it is a germ disease, and the same report comes from Peoria.

In North Carolina the examination of the blood of a negro who has the disease in an aggravated form revealed a distinct organism. Specimens have been sent to Richmond, Va., and to the Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore in the hope that a microscopic examination will give something definite and help to solve the mystery. North Carolina doctors believe that it is a germ disease.

In North Carolina it may be said that the corn origin of pellagra is generally rejected, but even without the extraordinary declared against Western corn as being guilty if corn is responsible.

Dr. William T. Wooley of Charlotte, N. C., accepts the corn theory and attributes the disease to corn that has been shock cured. It is husked and marketed, he says, before the corn has had time to dry, whereas sixty days longer should be allowed to corn in the shock than to corn in the field. This is given by him as one of the explanations why Western corn is more to be feared than the Southern. He would protect the public by prohibiting the mills from using any corn except that which has been cured under proper supervision.

A One Armed Pianist. From Musical America. Hungary's one armed pianist and composer, Count Géza Zichy, reached his sixtieth birthday in the first week of the month. As a boy of 14 he lost his right arm through an accident he met with while hunting, but even without the usual complement of fingers he was not to be deterred from devoting his life to music.

With Liszt and Robert Schumann as his teachers he developed an extraordinary left hand technique and gained a comprehensive knowledge of the art of composing. His principal work has been made in the domain of opera. His "Ahar" found its way to Berlin; both it and "Meister Roland" have been performed frequently in Hungary. He has also produced a large choral work, "Dolores," and a great many songs and piano pieces. A "Valse d'Adèle" he wrote for the left hand was arranged by Liszt even before Liszt's death. "Heaven! it is never played now."

COST OF LIVING CLIMBS.

But Most Trust Prices Are Said to Be Left Far Behind.

The cost of living, which has been increasing so rapidly for most of the last thirteen years is again advancing from the slightly lower levels brought by the depression of 1908. All through the past summer the prices of the necessities of life have been slowly advancing, reaching on August 1 the highest figure reported for that date since 1907.

The average cost of the supplies practically every household must buy has increased over 40 per cent. since 1906, but the Review of Reviews remarks that it is "rather interesting" to note in the Bradstreet statistics that the commodities controlled by the trusts have generally shown a smaller increase in price than the average.

The refined petroleum sold in 1906 for 7.5 cents a gallon and the wholesale price now is 8 1/2 cents. Sugar cost in 1906 4 1/2 cents a pound and costs now 4.25 cents. Anthracite coal in 1906 cost $4.25 a ton and is now $4.50.

The Bradstreet agency has selected 108 articles of domestic consumption and has kept a careful record of their prices month by month for seventeen years. The highest point ever reached was in March, 1907, after which came the moderate slump caused by the financial disturbances of that year. We are now marching steadily back toward this high record and the August figures are only 6.5 per cent. below it.

Some of the individual cases of increased costs are much more impressive than the average. Rubber has advanced from 81 cents a pound in 1906 to $1.36 a pound now; pork from $2.25 a barrel to $21.75; mutton from 12 1/2 cents a dozen to 28 cents; corn from 34 cents a bushel to 80 cents; wheat from 64 cents a bushel to 70, and so forth. The figures given are wholesale prices and as a rule the advance to the ultimate consumer has been decidedly greater.

American Sportswomen.

From the Lady's Pictorial.

We have heard sometimes that American play that some of them are rather unimpressive, not only in the spirit but in the letter. If this is so then their women-kind must be, and indeed they are, a superior creation, as no one makes a more delightful opponent than an American lady. I remember when one of them was being condoled with on suffering from a defeat from one of the leading Welsh players she said with a cheerful smile: "I guess she played better golf than I did—so I can't grudge." Could anything have shown a more sporting spirit than that?
